A CHRISTMAS BATH.—At the world's convention of the Women's Christian Temperance Union in Boston, Sidney Dallar, of Morehead, told a group of reporters in Tremont Temple a temperance story.

"My wife," said Mr. Dallas, "is one of the most earnest temperance workers in Australia. In the course of her missionary work she hears many a strange tale."

"A Melbourne woman told her last Christmas time how one night, during the holidays, her husband stayed out till about 3 a. m. We all know what that means, especially during the holidays, don't we?"

"Well, this man, when he got home, thought that he would go boldly to the bathroom and take a bath. That would remove from his wife's mind any suspicions as to his condition. It would show her, in a word, that he was all right."

"So he undressed, filled the tub and plunged in. Hot and enfevered as he was, he enjoyed the bath. As he splashed and scrubbed and puffed he heard a slight noise, and looking up, saw his wife in the doorway."

"His wife was regarding him with an expression of unfeigned contempt. He was rather amazed at that. But he said nothing. He lowered his head and went on scrubbing."

"Well, what are you doing?" she asked.

"Can't you see what I am doing?" he answered. "I'm rubbing up some more lather. I'm taking a bath."

"She sniffed and said as she turned to go:

"Why don't you take off your underclothes, then?"

WERN JON BALKED.—A well known Green Mountain General Store, notwithstanding his gravity of manner, is given to quiet joking when it can be done without offense to the parties involved.

Since the appearance of automobiles madame has refused to go out driving for fear that something serious would happen, as she "knew their horse would act badly."

She was finally induced to go to a nearby village for a visit, and fortunately they did not meet any autos going, but the deacon said, "Mother was fidgety and uncomfortable the entire journey."

When they returned everything went off nicely until they were nearly in sight of their own doorway, and a large touring car carried up to them, when madame was at once beset with fright, and threatened to jump from the carriage unless the deacon stopped for her to get out. By the time she was safely on terra firma "old Dolly" was quietly cropping grass by the roadside apparently unconscious of the presence of the dreaded auto. The autoist stopped seeing that they were old people, and asked the deacon if he could do anything to help him, and the deacon, with a twinkle in his eye, said: "Yes, if you will only lead my wife past your machine I think we'll be all right."—Pittsburg Press.

COULDN'T FOOL HIM TWICE.—The heavy clouds were massing in the west, the lightning was flashing, and the thunder was rumbling ominously.

The fond mother gathered her young hopeful to her, and tried logically to calm his fears.

"There's no danger, dear, God sends the thunder storm to clear the air, water the flowers, and make things good. You mustn't be frightened. It won't harm you, and everything will be better when it's over."

The little chap listened intently, and when his mother finished he looked at her quizzically.

"No, no, mamma," he murmured: "You talk exactly the way you did last week when you took me to the dentist, to have that tooth pulled."—Harper's Weekly.

THE VILLAIN!—"Well, sir," said the great lawyer.

"I am a defaulter," he said, "and I want you to defend me."

The other shook him by the hand. "Certainly I will defend you, my friend," he murmured, kindly. "And how many hundred thousand did you say—"

"Hundred thousand?" the client interrupted. "Oh, sir, don't think me worse than I am. It is only $400 in all, and I expect to pay back every cent before I die."

"George," he said to the office boy, "show this dishonest rascal out!"—Kansas City Journal.

An Anderson Took.

The function of the king's medieval times was in a measure important one, and he who filled the post had often very great influence with his sovereign. King Louis, the emperor of Germany, the king of Spain, the favorite jester of Francis I. was reported that his majesty, as a very generous nature, he acceded to a request of Charles V., emperor of Germany, that he might pass through France on his way from Spain to the Netherlands. Putting aside all recollection of what he had suffered at the emperor's hands while a captive in Spain, Francis was preparing to receive Charles with much ceremony and splendor. Observing one morning that Triboulet was scribbling industriously upon a bit of paper, Francis inquired what he was doing.

"I have just added the name of Emperor Charles of Germany to my list of fools," answered the jester. "I foresee who is committing the incredible folly of intrusting himself to you by passing through your Kingdom."

"Folly? How if I should let him pass safely?"

"Then I shall substitute your name for his," was the audacious retort of the fool.

Was by His Victim.

Baron de Mohrenheim, a Russian diplomat, was one of the statesmen who were the political life of his country. He did not believe in conceding a point if hard fighting seemed likely to bring victory. While holding a high position in St. Petersburg his life was threatened by a conspiracy. A revolution had been decided to kill him, and after the plot was discovered he had the man brought before him. The accused was a youth who had been driven by starvation to join the revolutionists. "You do not agree with what I am doing?" said the baron in a friendly tone. The man answered defiantly in the negative. "Very well," said the intended victim, "every man is entitled to his opinion, and I think that what you want to work." He then ordered him to be freed and found him employment in his own service, where the workman remained till the day of his death a few years afterward.

An Organized Hoax.

An English Christmas card is a specimen of its kind. It is a masterpiece of play, but it plays with one hand while the other is out for coin, and boys and men sing Christmas carols and then take a collection, apportioning money with what I am doing?" said the baron in a friendly tone. The man answered defiantly in the negative. "Very well," said the intended victim, "every man is entitled to his opinion, and I think that what you want to work." He then ordered him to be freed and found him employment in his own service, where the workman remained till the day of his death a few years afterward.

The Marvel of Distance.

The distance to the nearest star is so tremendous that, like many of the facts of astronomy, it is beyond the grasp of the human imagination. Though not beyond the realm of mathematical demonstration, light, which travels at a speed of 186,000 miles in a single second of time, takes over four years to reach us from the nearest star. The time upon by an epic is so conservative that a point of it would be long enough to reach around the earth. It would take ten pounds of it to reach to the moon and over 3,000 pounds to stretch to the sun. But to get a thread long enough to reach the nearest star would require half a million tons. If a railroad could be built to this star and the fare fixed at a cent a mile the total cost of the journey would be $226,000,000,000, or more than sixty times the whole amount of coined gold in the world.

Black Rod's Knock.

What is the meaning of this hostile banging of the door of the house of commons in Black Rod's inoffensive humbly knock three times for admission and wait outside until the members of the house of commons have been summoned to the people decide to open their doors unto him? It is one of several quaint and curious customs still preserved in parliament, a survival from a period of history when the house of commons was not so free and independent or so sacred from royal intrusion as it has been since the revolution.—Michael MacDonald in Grand Magazine.

Nothing New Under the Sun.

Slang phrases in course of time become absorbed into the vernacular just in the same way that someone rhymes and unversity words become institutions. Take the following example. The famous lines

Mother, may I go out to swim?
Yes, my darling daughter.
Hang your clothes on a berry limb
And don't go near the water, are at least 1,200 years old, being found in a book of jests of the fifth century, collected by Hierocles—London Chronicle.
